Ten Commandments of Computer Ethics

- RULE No. 1 Remember the Human

- DO UNTO OTHERS AS YOU WOULD HAVE OTHERS DO UNTO YOU

- You need to remember that you are talking to a real person when you are online

- The internet brings people together who would otherwise never meet.

RULE NO. 2 Adhere to the same standards online that you follow in real life

- You need to behave the same way online that you do in real life.
- You need to remember that you can get caught doing things you should not be doing online just like in real life.
- You are still talking to a real person with feelings even though you can't see them

RULE NO. 3 Know where you are in cyberspace

- Always take a look around when you enter a new domain when surfing the web.
- Get a sense of what the discussion group is about before you join it.

Rule NO. 4 Respect other people's time and Bandwidth.

- Keep in mind that individuals might not read your email. (you are not the center of the world)
- Keep your post and emails to a minimum by saying what you want to say
- Remember everyone won't answer your questions

RULE NO. 5 Make yourself look good online

- Remember to always check your spelling and grammar before posting
- Always know what you are talking about and make sense saying it.
- Be polite and pleasant to everyone

RULE NO. 6 Share expert knowledge

- Ask question online
- Share what you know online
- Post the answers to your questions online because someone may have the same question you do

RULE NO. 7 Help keep flame wars under control

- Flaming is what people do when they express a strongly held opinion without holding back any emotion." (Shea, 1994)

RULE NO.8 Respect people's privacy

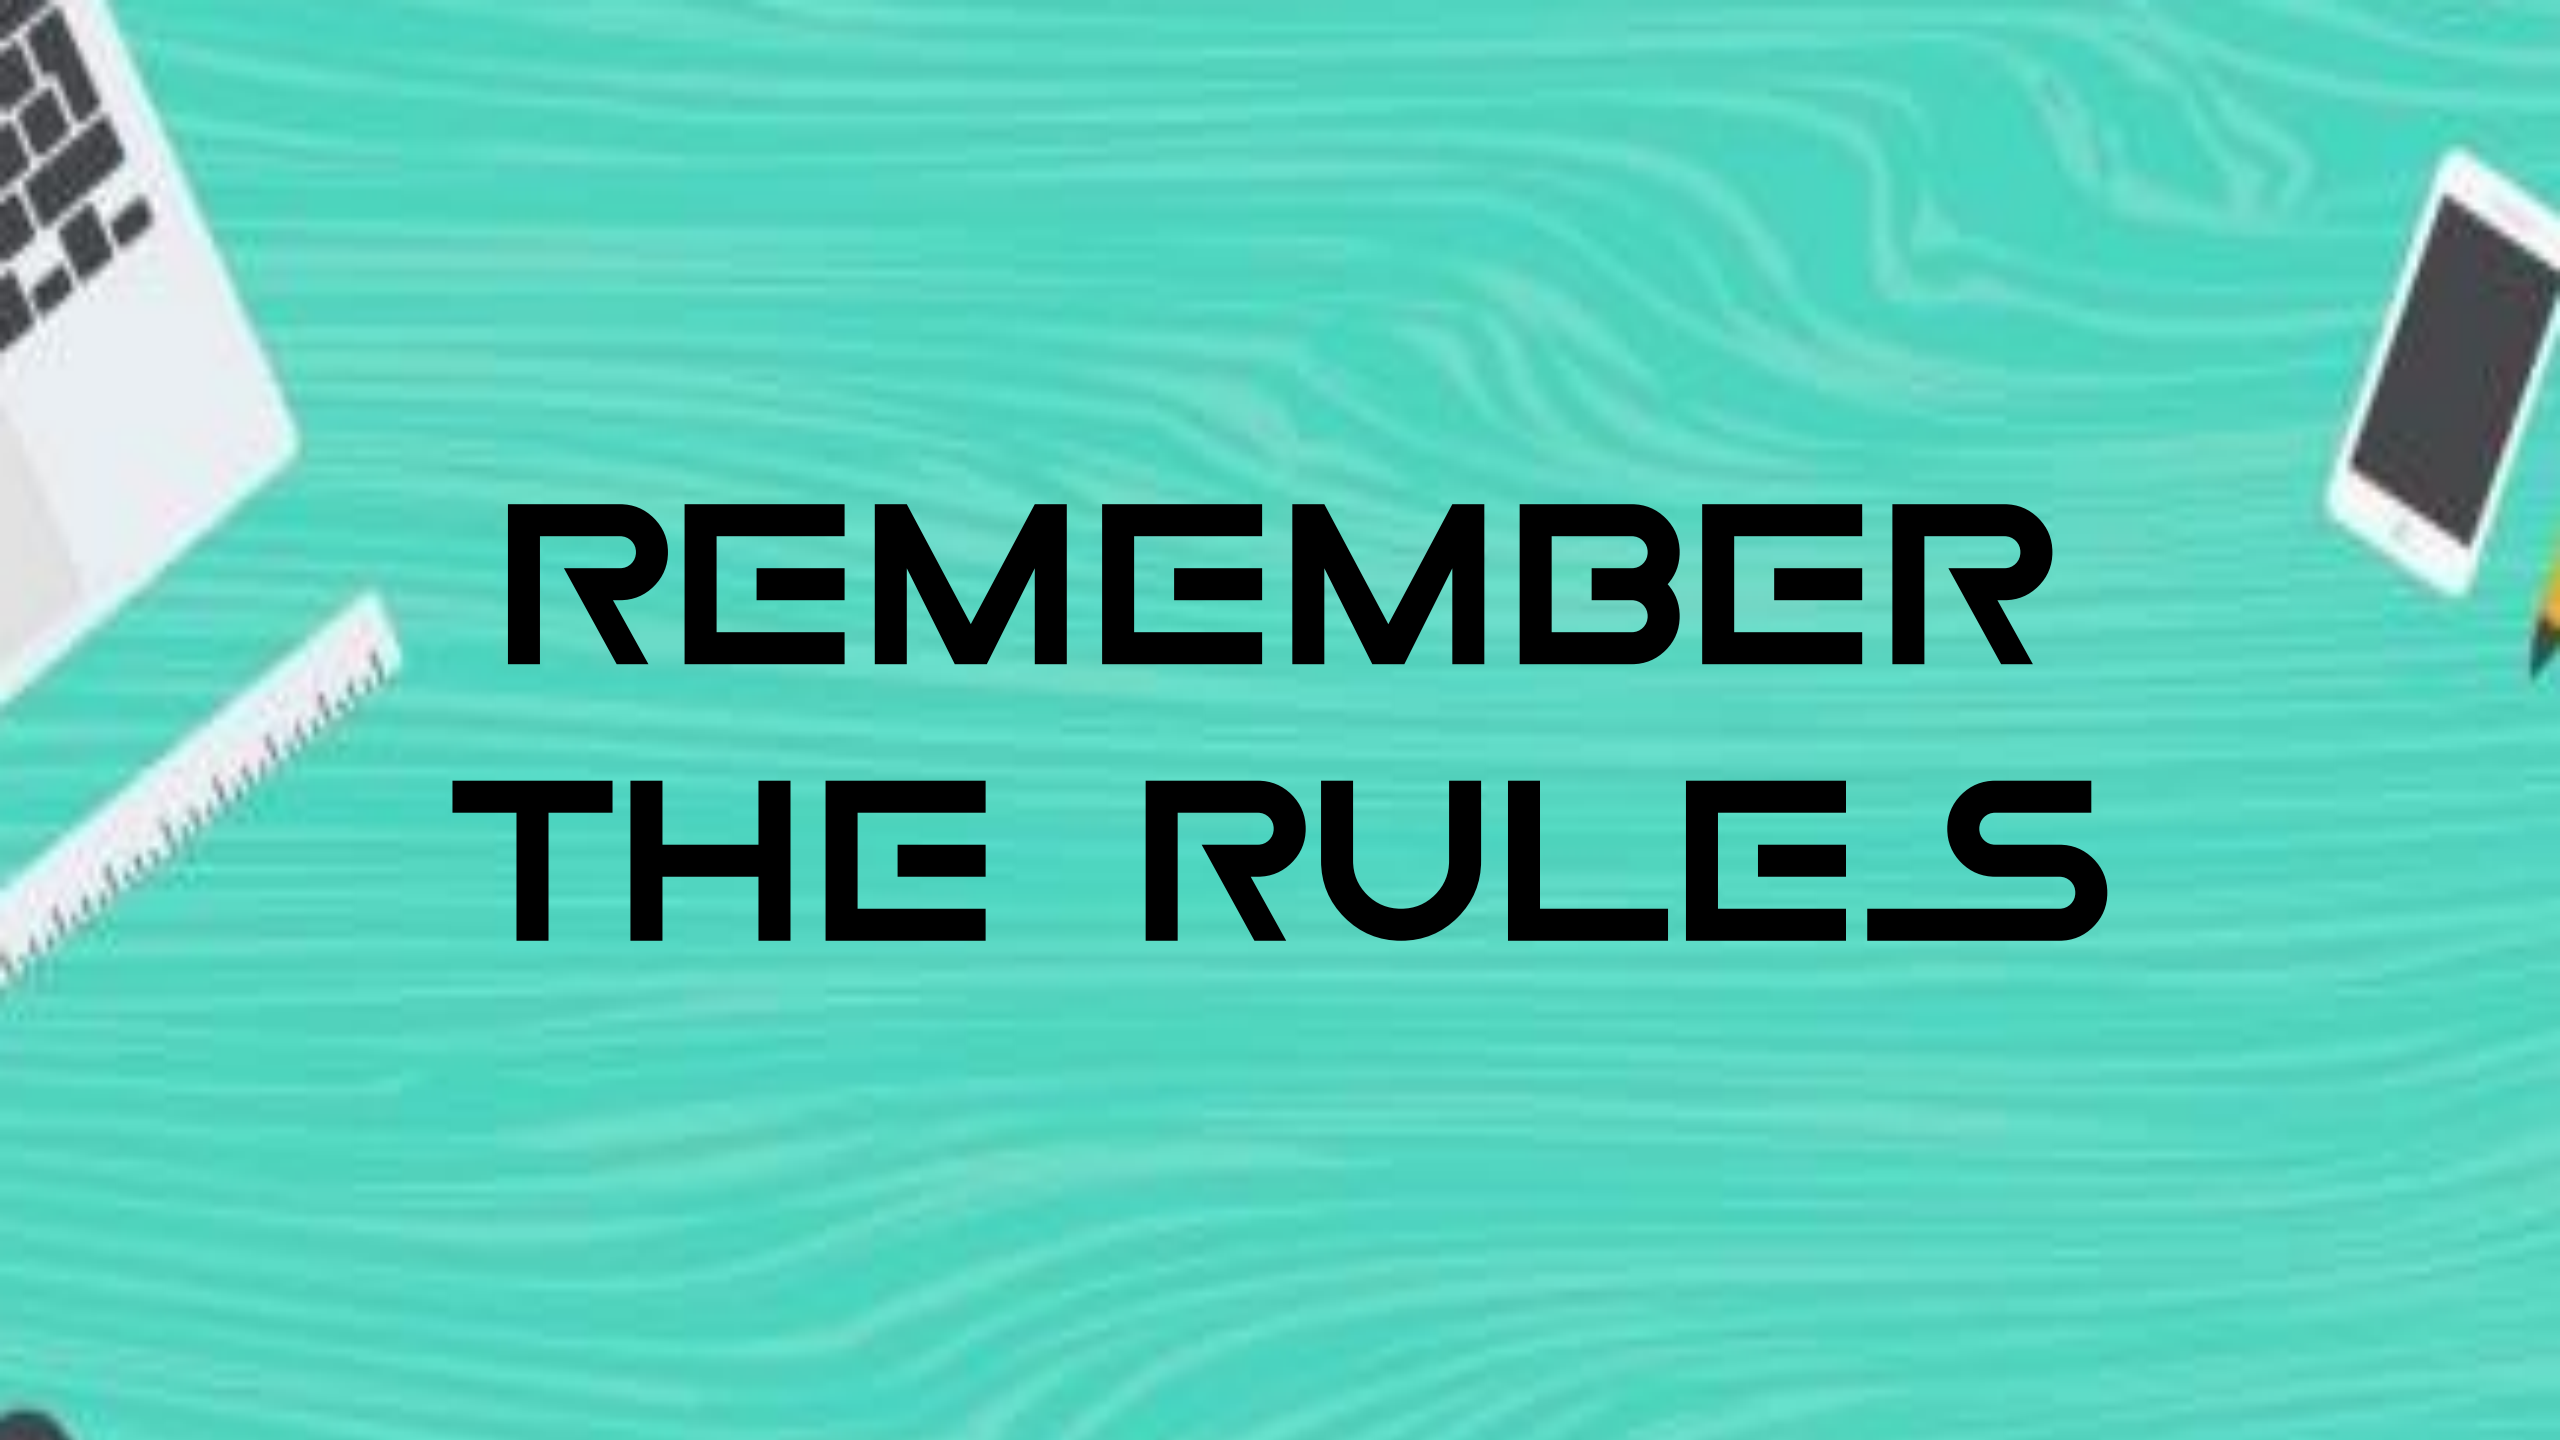

- Do not read other people's emails, messages without permission.
- Going through other people's thing could cost you your job or could even go to jail.

RULE NO. 9 Don’t abuse your power

- Do not take advantage of other people just because you have more knowledge or power than them.
- Treat others as you would want them to treat you if the roles were reversed

Rule NO. 10 Be forgiving of other people's mistakes

- Do not point out mistakes to people online
- Remember that you were once the new kid on the block
- You still need to have good manners even though you are online and cannot see the person face to face
